WATS 1020

Final Project

Design Planning

My final project is going to be a site for a fake camp called Camp Orkiss. I worked as a counselor and supervisor at a children's overnight camp in college during my summers at college. The site I'm making will be a career site for my fake camp. It's the website people interested in working at the camp would be directed to learn more about the camp, job positions, and Orcas Island. The camp is located on Orcas Island, WA so perspective employees would be interested to learn about the beautiful island they would be living on for the summer. Also, there is information provided for them to learn about what they need to bring and do to prepare to work at camp for an entire summer.

There will be a map on the site showing Orcas Island, WA, where the camp is located. At the top I would like to do a carousel of images like the carousel we did for 'add-a-map' assignment we did earlier this quarter. The images will show off staff working at camp and some photos of the scenery and camp. I am going to use personal photos that I have from working at camp in college. I figured it would be okay as long as the real camp's name isn't in any of the photos. At the bottom I would like to have a form area for people to enter their name and email address so the camp can send them additional information such as how and where to apply.

I will use Bootstrap for layout and styling and to help make the site responsive. I will use jQuery as my third party library to assist with DOM manipulation and Leaflet again for the map. My event listener will be for the submit button for the form at the bottom of the page to ensure the fields are filled out correctly.
